King Pins is a different kind of real-time strategy game: an arcade experience with the depth and complexity of a full scale RTS game. Instead of hours of slow build-up, think minutes, where each round starts with a short cut-scene where you see the state of the battle, and the phases in between are performed by your characters as they do their stuff. This makes the game play fun, fast-paced and rather addictive! It is a tightly focused game, but still includes a lot of content and depth, and still has a long playable time! You start the game with a small army and no buildings, just the one main unit the King. At the start, you start with a small area to grow and expand your territory, and you need to build everything yourself: barracks, resources, troops, upgrades, training centers... As you play, the game may become easier or harder: all buildings, units and upgrades may be purchased with money, but you will get new bonuses for completing special missions (which may even unlock new buildings, units or upgrades, if you are a little patience!). King Pins may be an "impulse buy", or a game you play for hours and hours to unlock all power ups, bonuses and decorations to dress up your armies! If that does not draw you, the game also comes with a 2-hour campaign! You can even (after completing the tutorial) get on your way right away with the starting map! Key Features Real time Strategy game in Real time: 20-minute rounds! 5 civilizations with various play-styles, different units and buildings Fight for the King's life (or watch him fight for you!) 50+ items to get and unlock Different difficulty levels (AI, easy, hard) Content generation: Map generation and all buildings, units and upgrades are randomly generated at each start Adaptive gameplay: If you lose the King, just lose! You won't lose any resources or buildings Category:Windows games Category:2016 video games Category:Real-time strategy video games Category:Video games developed in Sweden1. In Fez, you play as the eponymous main character, a little guy stuck in a massive land called "Fez". The game begins in a simple world, with four colors and a central story, but soon you'll be sucked into the world of color, perception and a style all of your own. About the Gameplay: Fez is a game about a lot of things. There are cubes. There are hats. There are massive worlds that you can explore and secrets to discover. When you're not exploring Fez's expansive universe, you'll have to solve challenging physics puzzles, manipulate time, and pay careful attention to the invisible forces that surround you. Fez is a game that brings us back to playing with blocks and puzzle cabinets. Fez is a game about the magic of discovery. About Perceptions: The world of Fez is a 3D game, but it appears 2D. You play as the "Main Guy" in a 2D world, and as the game progresses your main character notices more and more things in his surroundings. This is a game of perception. About the music: You'll be able to choose a soundtrack that is compatible with your mood, as well as your perception of the world around you. Fez has a big soundtrack with dozens of wonderful pieces of music. You'll be amazed by the music, but you'll be bewitched by the sound of the piano in particular. About Free Content: Fez has quite a lot of extra content. There are secrets that don't appear in the tutorial. There are alternate endings. There are stages that are only available to complete after you reach a certain point in the game. If you're looking for a full game, you can buy the full game, but if you're looking for some secret content, Fez's extra content is free. About the Audio: The audio in Fez is full of charm. There's retro sound effects and 16-bit chip music, as well as a full soundtrack. The music in Fez is the soundtrack of a 16-bit game. If you're playing Fez you should keep your eyes open for music you've heard before. About the Difficulty Level: Fez is a game that is designed to be played by everyone. Review Why We Love It In the culinary world, the number of places that can be described as “strange, off-kilter, or feel-good” is rather limited—and we love the Guatemalan eatery Chew. Located in the Amazon Quarter (a section of Haddonfield where a small neighborhood’s worth of notable stores, restaurants, and small-scale arts have come together), Chew is, as advertised, that kind of place. Though neither on the street, nor in walking distance from any shop that we can remember, Chew occupies a sort of hidden corner. The closest you’ll get to it is by looking for a street sign that says something like “Bad Street, 6th Avenue, 69th Circle.” Founded in 2014 by Steph Downs and Hugh Dwyer, the half-Sami, half-Guatemalan-American pair that is the brainchild behind Chew, the restaurant is an homage to the rich culture that, sure enough, is currently lacking in the South Jersey restaurant scene. Along with a bonafide English muffin and a cup of coffee, your order comes with a good dose of cultural authenticity—one that can’t easily be found in the default menus of any of the establishments mentioned in this review. The “An Inside Look at the Owners” section of the menu offers a quick, thoughtful snapshot of how Chew came to be and about its great ownership duo. As we can expect, their story is a bit...illustrative. The basement of the former “Chew Grinders,” where Chew now resides is full of rusting beat up machinery and clanking buckets...the friendliest of vibes. Strangely, the dishes that are served here by customers walking through are simple mixtures of mostly free-range chicken and shrimp and rice. They come out with English muffin patty in hand and some sort of homemade salsa, and these dishes are what they seem—slightly off-kilter dishes that you might order from someplace like a kiosk in a small, Latin-American market by a bakery-turned-steakhouse (if you find yourself in Haddonfield). What we really love about Chew though, is the local and not-so-local perspective that it provides on the food, culture, and daily life of the small South Jersey town that it occupies. The owners’ experience and Recommended Requirements OS: Windows 7 (64bit) Windows 8.1 (64bit) Windows 10 I've been a gamer for around 13 years, starting with games like Super Mario 64, Shenmue, MLB '99, NFS Hot Pursuit, Prototype, Spyro the Dragon, etc. I got sick of single player RPG's eventually so I started really getting into Halo and then Gears of War, which I absolutely love. I'm currently playing the Multiplayer beta of Destiny 2, which is going well for me so far. I'm thinking about buying a PS4 just so I can play Destiny 2, Halo 5: Guardians, and possibly Injustice 2 if I am able to get it for a good price. Thanks for reading!
