Additional Information: In 1990, there were 1,844 liturgies observed with more than 4,000 participants; and the number has been growing rapidly since then. By 2013, these numbers have more than tripled to 7,098 liturgies with more than 23,000 participants. The size of these gatherings has also grown significantly as well. I hope to offer some fresh ways to get people thinking about and doing liturgy again. Today, we celebrate a feast of resurrection, a good liturgical day to share in the joy of Life, in the light of the Lord's Resurrection! benedictine order of nuns in syrian arab republic Benedictine Order in Syria: The Capital. (Benedictine Community Foundation) Read this fascinating article by André Heintz who is Secretary General of the Greater Syria Council (GSC) and discusses the history of the Order in Syria. The very extensive quote from him is included in the summary below. Damascus, capital of Syria « The Order of St. Benedict in Syria has been very important since the very beginning of the country. It contributed to the development of culture, as it can be seen by the very rich collection of medieval Christian literature, particularly manuscripts, which is kept in the hands of the Order (Theological College, which is, in fact, the oldest theological college in the Middle East). The Order is involved in education, and this is visible at the Syrian University of Damascus, which has always been supported by the Order. It has also supported the country's art. It is known that from the 4th century Saint Euthymius was responsible for the set up of the first Byzantine monastery in the country, and was a significant role in the renaissance of Damascene art. Through the help of his nuns, the Grand Master of the Order, Apollonia, was able to display her art talent in her late years; her memoirs and artworks were remarkable». The Order of St. Benedict came to Syria and Lebanon with the first Crusades. It is believed that one of the founders of the Order in Syria was St. Odilo. St. Bernard, a monk of the
