(credit: NASA) There is still a lot of uncertainty surrounding the current spaceflight budget for 2017, and it seems that no one knows exactly how the agencies will use their funding. For one, the White House has said they want a planetary program, but NASA's recently approved budget will only fund three lunar missions in 2016, and none for 2017. Aircard770sunlockcode

the checksum consists of two parts: a checksum of a card identification text and a checksum of a lock code (a-b). it is calculated on the basis of the format specified in the aircard770sunlockcode operation in the internet archive : <http://www.iana.org/assignments/aircard-numbers> . the checksum is defined as a variable length value. after decoding, the variable length starts with a 32 bit integer that indicates the length of the following part of the checksum (see the value of the field length). the following part is a variable length checksum of the card identification (cardchecksum). next comes the 8 bit checksum of the lock code

both parts are concatenated. this operation is only defined when the archive supports the lock code option. if the archive does not support the lock code option, operation aircard770sunlockcode is ignored and this operation is no-op, all fields in this logrecord are meaningless (they contain zeros). opcode operand mnemonic desc
