Libya faces deepening crisis after parliament votes to sack its executive, state media say. Libya's powerful army is blocking the path to its own prime minister who was sacked on Monday by a defiant parliament, state media said on Tuesday. Troops loyal to Khalifa Haftar, a commander of the so-called Libyan National Army (LNA), had not lifted the blockade since he launched an offensive in April, an army commander told the Reuters news agency. The parliament in Tripoli voted in June to dismiss the prime minister and temporarily appoint Haftar to a caretaker post, but the LNA, a parallel government in the east, said it has not recognised the appointment. The LNA is led by Haftar, a close ally of the United States, in contrast to the United Nations-backed government in Tripoli. They say each other are involved in a proxy war. Haftar vowed in April to unify the country and take Tripoli, but after his offensive stalled in May, he denounced the parliament as a fake body. The United Nations has warned that the power vacuum is a threat to Libya's security and stability. "We are all waiting for the developments," Ahmed Omar Bani, a spokesman for the commander of the LNA, told Al Jazeera. "The problem is the leadership in Tripoli are not in control. The UN is the only ones that will do anything in Libya," said Bani. The Eastern forces are trying to enforce their authority and control the state border while the Tripoli government is not strong enough. Bani added that the latter is just a caretaker government and will not be recognised by the LNA. The Tripoli-based government is trying to control the state borders but the former Khalifa Haftar-aligned army is not allowing them to reach the state's borders. - 'Failed war effort' - The UN Security Council warned last month that failing to unite the country would damage its finances and oil trade, and create a security vacuum. "Gaining control of Libya's oil production facilities will ensure a continued flow of revenue and utility
